the result of conflict. It assesses the applicable domestic legislative instruments within the three countries investigated as case studies: Iraq, Syria, and Lebanon, and highlights key domestic remedies that could serve as models for ensuring greater social cohesion and greater inclusion of minorities in the political life of these countries.

The Insider Nancy Woloch 2022-03-08 Virginia C. Gildersleeve was the most influential dean of Barnard College, which she led from 1911 to 1947. An organizer of the Seven College Conference, or “Seven Sisters,” the dedicated wearer of furs and diamonds and a voracious reader, she voiced a strong and unflinching view of the United Nations Charter. This biography, written by Nancy Woloch, explores Gildersleeve’s complex career as a public figure, an intellectual, a religious leader, and a political advocate. Gildersleeve’s influence was not limited to her work at Barnard; she also had a significant impact on the world of education, politics, and social activism.

The Making of Arab Americans Hani J. Bawardi 2014-05-01 While conventional wisdom points to the Arab-Israeli War of 1967 as the gateway for the founding of the first Arab American national political organization, such advocacy in fact began with the Syrian nationalist movement, which emerged from immigration trends at the turn of the last century. Bringing this long-neglected history to life, The Making of Arab Americans overturns the notion of an Arab population that was too diverse to share common goals. Tracing the forgotten histories of the Free Syria Army, the Syrian Social Nationalists, and the Arab National League, the book reveals a timeline of events that played a crucial role in shaping the political and social landscape of the Middle East.

Christians and the Middle East Conflict Paul S Rowe 2014-06-20 Christians and the Middle East Conflict deals with the relationship of Christians and Christian theology to the various conflicts in the Middle East, a topic that is often sensationalized but still insufficiently understood. Political developments over the last two decades, however, have prompted observers to reexamine the central role religious motivations play in shaping public discourses. This book proceeds on the assumption that neither a focus on the eschatological nor a narrow understanding of the plight of Christians in the Middle East is sufficient. Instead, it is necessary to understand Christians in context and to explore the ways that Christian theology applies through the actions of Christians who have lived and continue to live through conflict in the region either as native inhabitants or interested foreign observers. This volume addresses issues of concern to Christians from theological perspectives from the perspectives of Christian responses to conflict throughout history, and in reference to the contemporary realities of Christians in the Middle East. The essays in this volume combine contextual political and theological reflections written by both scholars and Christian activists and will be of interest to students and scholars of Politics, Religion and Middle East Studies.
