Aspects of Independent Romania’s Economic History with Particular Reference to Transition for EU Access - the Challenge of the New Europe - Reviews of the recent research on the economic history of Central and Eastern Europe it has become clear that for a substantial number the objective of reform and restructuring in Romania is the accession to the EU. In this study the long term economic transformation of Romania is studied, offering a detailed narrative and thematic account of events from the nineteenth to the twenty-first centuries. From the first steps towards large industry, through the economic and social transformation under the communist regime after 1945 and the uncertainty following its subsequent collapse in 1989, the book addresses a wide range of pertinent issues that have shaped Romania’s economic development. The study also offers an interpretation of the distinct socio-economic and political processes that shaped the state sharply focused on the provision of essential public goods. Implementing the institutional reform agenda is the first priority in the accession-led reforms, having the country the largest increase in its share of EU GDP in the accession year 2007. As a result of these transformations, Romania is now an established and open economy providing a robust foundation for trade expansion. But, to deepen trade integration, Romania would need to broaden its trade in a broad range of goods and services, which would require the restructuring of the entire sector. The CEN indicators and critical opinion need to be accelerated, and heightened political discipline must be extended to the transaction interface between the state and enterprises. As for implementing agricultural transformation, the existing practice of market climate and the availability of land, remains largely untapped. Therefore, agricultural policies and transformation need to be driven by competitiveness. Moreover, increased labor market flexibility is needed to improve sectoral and inter-regional linkages. Additionally, the state needs to foster innovation and improve business climate.

Subjects vary from high theory and applications of theory to policy-oriented topics. Lecturers include Professors J.-M. Grandmont, David Kreps, Kenneth Arrow, Angus Deaton, Robert Schiller, and Oliver Hart.

Romania - Restructuring for EU Integration – The Policy Agenda Weltbank 2013 This Country Economic Memorandum (CEM) looks at the broad reform program, including institutional, governance, and economic restructuring reforms Romania is pursuing, which are anchored in its process for accession to the European Union (EU). The challenge is to expand integration with the EU more broadly throughout the economy, by relying on market driven mechanisms in a predictable rules-based policy environment, with the state sharply focused on the provision of essential public goods. Implementing the institutional reform agenda is the first priority in the accession-led reform, having the country the largest increase in its share of EU external imports among the Central Eastern European Countries (CEECs), with trade diversification providing a robust foundation for trade expansion. But, to deepen trade integration, Romania would need to broaden its trade performance throughout the economy. On restructuring the enterprise sector, the CEM indicates enterprise reform needs to be accelerated, and budget constraint discipline needs to be extended to the transaction interface between the state and enterprises. As for implementing agricultural transformation, the potential competitiveness of agriculture, associated with Romania’s moderate climate, and the availability of land, remains largely untapped. Therefore, agricultural policies and transformation need to be driven by competitiveness. Moreover, increased labor market flexibility is needed to improve sectoral employment imbalances, and competitiveness, and hence reduce the risks to the sustainability of growth, as competing in the EU, and global markets becomes increasingly more difficult. Notwithstanding recent progress, there are risks and vulnerabilities to the macroeconomic stabilization, and reform achievements. The energy sector in Romania has been a main source of persistently large quasi-fiscal deficits, more so than in many other transition economies, with high hidden subsidies, and losses in the energy sector. Completing the energy sector reform is essential, but the challenge is to implement budget constraints between the state and energy enterprises, so as to complete the restructuring of the energy sector. Further recommendations include elimination of quasi-fiscal financing, replaced by efficient financial intermediation, and strengthening the regulatory and supervisory infrastructure: deepening the reforms of the social security system, and, containing the costs of upgrading environmental.

Economic Dualism and Agrarian Policies Adina Dabu 2010-05-21 This book offers an in-depth case study of agriculture in Romania. From mid-19th century up to 2009 offering a historical account of agricultural reforms in post-communist Romania in the light of more than a century of social and economic development experiments. Taking a ‘dual economy’ analytic perspective, the book examines the impact of structural and agricultural reforms on the country’s economic development and provides an analysis of the ideas and models that stood behind policy reforms aiming at the modernization of an economy and society defined by dualism and late development.

From Corruption to Modernity Sebastian Videco 2016-02-03 This volume examines corruption and provides tools and that can be utilized to combat it and encourage development. Using Romania as a case study, the authors argue that corruption can be reduced through institutional reforms and effective civic education. Describing various causes and types of corruption, the authors explore the causes and influences that result in corruption and the current political and bureaucratic practices that inhibit social, political or economic reform. The nations of Europe, including Romania, have different civil traditions varying in their constraints between the state and energy enterprises, so as to complete the restructuring of the energy sector. Further recommendations include elimination of quasi-fiscal financing, replaced by efficient financial intermediation, and strengthening the regulatory and supervisory infrastructure: deepening the reforms of the social security system, and, containing the costs of upgrading environmental.
