Regionalization and Global Economic Integration

The book brings together authoritative essays that identify and examine various initiatives to promote economic integration in Asia and Europe. It addresses the key questions of how economic integration programs in the OECD (mostly the EU but also NAFTA), as well as the proposals for closer economic integration in Asia, are combining traditional market liberalization with new regulatory ideas, and what it will take to make it so. Is Asia reshaping its economy in response to the changing global landscape? More importantly, how will Asia weather the severe global financial and economic storming from the global credit crisis? How will it restructure its model of economic development to improve the living standards and the prospects of its people? Is Asia on the path to more prosperity in the world economy? This book covers new ground by connecting theory, assembling detailed evidence on the basic facts, and examining the implications using a set of analytical tools to explore the economic, political, and financial integration trajectories of the three regional blocs as well as several other prominent regional blocs.
